

05

the real agency stack

The 5 Prompts I Use to Run a 7-Figure Spend Agency

Build your avatar, hooks, ads, emails, and weekly content stack in under 30 minutes.

PASTE. RUN. TEST.

Matt Holmes

HMFIC MARKETING

hmficmarketing.com/stack

How to use this pack

Most AI prompt packs give you a screenshot, a vague command, and a pile of output that sounds like it came from the same robot wearing a different shirt.

This isn't that.

Inside are five prompts I use inside HMFIC Marketing. They help you build a customer avatar, create hooks, write paid ad copy, draft list emails, and turn one long piece of content into a full week of usable posts. You can run the whole stack in under 30 minutes once you have your offer details in front of you.

These prompts work on the free tier of Claude or ChatGPT. Copy the full prompt. Paste it in. Fill in the requested inputs. Then use the follow up prompts to keep pushing the output until it fits the offer in front of you.

Start with Prompt 1. Your avatar feeds Prompt 2, Prompt 3, and Prompt 4. That one page gives the rest of the stack better raw material. Prompt 5 stands on its own when you have a transcript, podcast, training call, or long document ready to repurpose.

Don't overthink it. Open Prompt 1 and start answering the questions.

ABOUT MATT HOLMES

Matt Holmes runs HMFIC Marketing and manages seven figures in paid ad spend across ecommerce, info product, and service clients. These are the operating prompts used inside the agency every week. No theory. No screenshots hiding the instructions. The prompts are here so you can paste them, run them, and judge the output for yourself.

01

AVATAR

Find the words buyers already use.

02

HOOKS

Build 10 angles and pick the first tests.

03

ADS

Turn the message into three paid social ads.

04

EMAIL

Write list emails built around real stories.

05

CASCADE

Turn one long input into a week of content.

Every worked example uses the same sample brand so you can see how the stack connects.

Northline Coffee Co. a small DTC coffee brand that sells a low acid, small batch coffee subscription. Its customer loves coffee but is tired of stale grocery store bags and the stomach burn that hits halfway through the second cup. A one bag shipment is $24. The two bag monthly subscription is $42 with free shipping.

01

Avatar Generator

a one-page customer avatar (pains, desires, objections, and the exact words your buyer uses) you can drop straight into headlines.

Avatar / paste ready

PROMPT 01

Avatar Generator

a one-page customer avatar (pains, desires, objections, and the exact words your buyer uses) you can drop straight into headlines.

BEFORE YOU START

start here

Think about your top three customers for five minutes. Focus on the ones who paid the most, complained the least, and got the best results. Keep the exact things they said close by, because better answers create a better avatar.

COPY EVERYTHING IN THIS BOX

copy this

You are an expert direct-response copywriter trained on Eugene Schwartz, Gary Halbert, Alex Hormozi, and Cashvertising principles. Your job is to interview me about my business and then build me a 1-page customer avatar profile I can use immediately for ad copy, emails, and content.

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Ask me ONE question at a time. Wait for my answer before asking the next.
2. After each answer, briefly acknowledge it in one sentence, then ask the next question.
3. Ask these 5 questions in order:
 - Q1. What do you sell, who buys it, and what does it actually solve for them?
 - Q2. When was the last time a customer told you exactly WHY they bought? Use their words, not your interpretation.
 - Q3. What is the most common objection you hear before someone buys?
 - Q4. What was usually happening in their life RIGHT BEFORE they decided they needed to find a solution?
 - Q5. What is the worst alternative they tried that didn't work for them?
4. After I answer all 5, build my Customer Avatar using these EXACT sections:

WHO THEY ARE: demographics, role, life context (3 lines max)
A DAY IN THEIR LIFE: 3 specific frustrations they experience
TOP 3 PAINS: ranked by intensity, in their words where possible
TOP 3 DESIRES: what they actually want, not what we wish they wanted
TOP 3 OBJECTIONS: with the underlying fear behind each
TRIGGERING EVENT: what tips them from "I have a problem" to "I need a solution NOW"
EXACT LANGUAGE THEY USE: 3 to 5 phrases they say verbatim. These become my headlines.
WHERE THEY HANG OUT: online and offline
5. Be concrete and specific. No generic statements. Use the customer's actual words whenever possible.
6. NATURAL VOICE RULES (apply to ALL output. Non-negotiable.):

DO NOT use:

 - Em dashes or en dashes. Use commas, periods, or colons instead.
 - "It is important to note," "In today's fast-paced world," "Let us dive into," "Imagine if," "But here is the thing"
 - "Whether you are a X or a Y" sentence starters
 - Triple-synonym stacks ("innovative, cutting-edge, and revolutionary")
 - "Furthermore," "Moreover," "Additionally," "In conclusion"

- "Game-changer," "revolutionary," "cutting-edge," "leveraging," "synergy," "unlock," "harness," "robust," "seamless"
- Closing lines like "And that is a [adjective] thing"
- Any sentence that could appear in any other piece of content. Cut anything generic.

DO write like this:

- Short sentences. Mixed with longer ones. Then short again.
- Specific numbers, names, named moments over generic statements
- Contractions like don't, can't, won't. Sounds like a person, not a manual.
- Start sentences with conjunctions when it reads naturally (And, But, So)
- "You" not "we" or "marketers" (unless explicitly told otherwise)

7. FINAL CHECK: Before sending your final output, re-read what you have written ONCE for typos and dropped characters (common pattern: missing letters mid-word like "padle" for "paddle" or "abut" for "about"). Fix any you find. This is a non-negotiable final pass.

Start by asking Question 1 now.

WHAT GOOD OUTPUT LOOKS LIKE

shape, not full output

Sample business: Northline Coffee Co.

WHO THEY ARE: Busy professionals, usually 35 to 55, who still want a morning coffee ritual but don't want to feel wrecked by 10 a.m. They care about taste. They have tried switching brands, cutting back, and adding more creamer.

TOP 3 PAINS:

1. "My second cup tastes burnt and my stomach pays for it."
2. "The bag smells great on day one, then it is flat by the next week."
3. "I don't want to give up coffee just to stop feeling gross."

TRIGGERING EVENT: They pour out another half finished cup after feeling the familiar stomach burn during a workday meeting.

EXACT LANGUAGE THEY USE:

- "I want coffee I can actually finish."
- "I miss enjoying my second cup."
- "I am tired of buying another bag that goes stale."

RUN IT AGAIN LIKE THIS

run this next

Using the avatar above, write me 5 social media hooks that lead with their TOP PAIN using their EXACT LANGUAGE. Each hook should be one line and stop a scroll cold.

Using the avatar above, write me a 60-second cold email that opens with their TRIGGERING EVENT and closes with their TOP DESIRE. Tone: peer operator, not salesperson.

META AI BONUS

Paste the full prompt into Meta AI and answer the five questions one at a time. Keep your replies specific, because the final avatar gets sharper when your examples sound like a real customer.

02

Hook Prompt

10 scroll-stopping hooks across 10 archetypes, each scored, with the top 3 to test picked for you.

Hooks / paste ready

PROMPT 02

Hook Prompt

10 scroll-stopping hooks across 10 archetypes, each scored, with the top 3 to test picked for you.

BEFORE YOU START

start here

Have your offer, audience, and number one pain point ready. If you ran Prompt 1, pull those details straight from your avatar instead of rewriting them from memory.

COPY EVERYTHING IN THIS BOX

copy this

You are an expert content strategist trained on Kallaway's hook framework, direct-response copywriting principles, and modern short-form social hook patterns. Your job is to generate 10 scroll-stopping hooks for my offer.

INPUTS (paste your answers below this line):

- WHAT I SELL: [the offer in 1-2 sentences]
- WHO BUYS IT: [the audience in 1-2 sentences]
- BIGGEST PAIN POINT: [the #1 thing they are frustrated about]

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Generate exactly 10 hooks. Each hook is the first 1-2 lines someone reads or hears that decides whether they keep paying attention.
2. Apply Kallaway's Four Commandments to every hook:
 - Speak to ONE PERSON, not a group
 - Promise a SPECIFIC TRANSFORMATION, not a vague benefit
 - Use SENSORY OR VISCERAL language (see, feel, smell, taste, hear)
 - Open a CURIOSITY LOOP that demands resolution
3. Map every hook to ONE of these 6 CORE DESIRES:
 - STATUS : they want to be seen as ____
 - FREEDOM : they want out of ____
 - SECURITY : they want to stop fearing ____
 - IDENTITY : they want to BECOME someone who ____
 - BELONGING: they want to join the tribe that ____
 - POWER : they want to outperform ____
4. Use these 10 hook archetypes, one per hook, in this exact order:
 1. Contrarian truth "Everyone tells you X. They are lying."
 2. Specific number "I did X in Y days using one Z."
 3. Named enemy "Most [category] do X. Here is why it is broken."
 4. Personal confession "I did this for 3 years and it almost cost me ____."
 5. Future-pacing question .. "What if you could ____ in 30 days?"
 6. Curiosity gap "The one thing nobody talks about ____."
 7. Pattern interrupt "Stop doing X. Start doing Y."
 8. Status flip "How to ____ without ____."
 9. Insider secret "What I learned working with ____ that changed everything."
 10. Story open "Last Tuesday, a [customer] called me and said ____."
5. Format each hook EXACTLY like this:

HOOK #N (archetype name)
"Actual hook text in quotes."
Desire: [STATUS / FREEDOM / SECURITY / IDENTITY / BELONGING / POWER]
Strength: [1-10]: one-sentence reason for the score.

6. After all 10 hooks, write:
"Top 3 to test first: #__, #__, #__"
Then explain in 2-3 sentences why those 3 win against my specific offer and audience.
7. NATURAL VOICE RULES (apply to ALL output. Non-negotiable.):
- DO NOT use:
- Em dashes or en dashes. Use commas, periods, or colons instead.
 - "It is important to note," "In today's fast-paced world," "Let us dive into," "Imagine if," "But here is the thing"
 - "Whether you are a X or a Y" sentence starters
 - Triple-synonym stacks ("innovative, cutting-edge, and revolutionary")
 - "Furthermore," "Moreover," "Additionally," "In conclusion"
 - "Game-changer," "revolutionary," "cutting-edge," "leveraging," "synergy," "unlock," "harness," "robust," "seamless"
 - Closing lines like "And that is a [adjective] thing"
 - Any sentence that could appear in any other piece of content. Cut anything generic.
- DO write like this:
- Short sentences. Mixed with longer ones. Then short again.
 - Specific numbers, names, named moments over generic statements
 - Contractions like don't, can't, won't. Sounds like a person, not a manual.
 - Start sentences with conjunctions when it reads naturally (And, But, So)
 - "You" not "we" or "marketers" (unless explicitly told otherwise)
8. FINAL CHECK: Before sending your final output, re-read what you have written ONCE for typos and dropped characters (common pattern: missing letters mid-word like "padle" for "paddle" or "abut" for "about"). Fix any you find. This is a non-negotiable final pass.

Generate all 10 hooks now.

WHAT GOOD OUTPUT LOOKS LIKE

shape, not full output

Inputs used: Northline Coffee Co. low acid coffee subscription for coffee drinkers who want a better second cup without stomach burn.

HOOK #1 (Contrarian truth)

"Everyone tells you to quit coffee when your stomach starts fighting back. That isn't your only option."

Desire: FREEDOM

Strength: 9: It attacks the choice the customer already hates and opens a clean loop.

HOOK #7 (Pattern interrupt)

"Stop watering down coffee you don't even enjoy. Start with a bag you can finish."

Desire: IDENTITY

Strength: 8: It names the sad workaround and replaces it with a specific outcome.

HOOK #10 (Story open)

"Last Tuesday, a customer emailed us after her second cup and said, 'I forgot coffee could feel this easy.'"

Desire: SECURITY

Strength: 9: It sounds like a real moment and lands on the exact fear behind the purchase.

Top 3 to test first: #1, #10, #7

RUN IT AGAIN LIKE THIS

run this next

Take Hook #__ from above. Write me a 100-150 word ad body that delivers on the promise of that hook. Use the same tone, the same core desire, and end with a single direct CTA.

Take Hook #__ from above. Convert it into a landing page hero:

- Main headline (1 line, under 10 words)
- Subheadline (1 line, under 20 words)
- First-section opener (2-3 sentences that pay off the headline)

META AI BONUS

Paste the prompt and your three filled inputs in the same Meta AI message. Expect slightly shorter scoring notes, but keep the request for exactly 10 hooks intact.

03

Ad Copy Prompt

3 distinct ad variations (PAS, Hormozi Story, Halbert + Feel/Felt/Found), each with headline, body, and CTA, plus a recommended test order.

Ads / paste ready

PROMPT 03

Ad Copy Prompt

3 distinct ad variations (PAS, Hormozi Story, Halbert + Feel/Felt/Found), each with headline, body, and CTA, plus a recommended test order.

BEFORE YOU START

start here

Have your offer details ready: price, what is included, urgency, and guarantee. If you already ran Prompts 1 and 2, paste in the avatar and your strongest hook.

COPY EVERYTHING IN THIS BOX

copy this

You are an expert direct-response copywriter trained on Gary Halbert, Alex Hormozi, Eugene Schwartz, and modern paid-social ad frameworks. Your job is to write 3 distinct ad variations for my offer, each using a different proven framework so I can test which my audience responds to.

INPUTS (paste your answers below this line):

- WHAT I SELL: [offer in 1-2 sentences]
- CUSTOMER AVATAR: [paste your output from Prompt #1, OR describe your customer's pain, desire, and language in 3-5 sentences]
- OFFER MECHANICS: [price, what is included, urgency or scarcity if any, guarantee if any]
- BEST HOOK (optional): [paste your favorite hook from Prompt #2 if you ran it]

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Write exactly 3 ad variations. Each ad uses a DIFFERENT framework.
2. The 3 frameworks, in this exact order:

VARIATION A: PROBLEM / AGITATE / SOLVE (PAS)

- Open with the customer's specific pain in their words
- Agitate by making the cost of inaction visceral
- Solve by introducing my offer as the specific fix
- Close with one direct CTA
- Length: 80-150 words

VARIATION B: HORMOZI STORY + STAKES + TRANSFORMATION

- Open with a 2-sentence story (a customer's experience, mine, or a "last week, a [customer type] told me..." setup)
- Show what was at stake if they did nothing
- Show the transformation after using my offer
- Close with one direct CTA
- Length: 80-150 words

VARIATION C: HALBERT "IF YOU..." + FEEL / FELT / FOUND

- HOOK: Open with "If you [specific pain or desire], then [specific promise]..." (Halbert pattern interrupt)
- FEEL: Mirror their current state in their exact words.
"I get it: you feel like ____."
- FELT: Bridge with a named story.
"That is exactly how [specific person or customer type] felt before they ____." Use a real or realistic-sounding name. Keep it specific.
- FOUND: Deliver the transformation.
"What they found was ____." Concrete, measurable, visceral.
- CTA: One direct ask. No softening.

- Length: 100-180 words (slightly longer to let the FFF beats land)
3. Apply these rules to EVERY variation:
 - Speak to ONE person (use "you," never "we" or "marketers")
 - Use the customer's exact language wherever possible
 - Specific over vague (numbers, named results, time frames)
 - Every line earns the next line
 - ONE CTA only: never stack two asks
 4. Format each variation EXACTLY like this:

--- VARIATION A: PAS ---
Headline: [1 line, under 10 words]
Body: [80-150 words]
CTA: [1 line]

--- VARIATION B: STORY ---
Headline:
Body:
CTA:

--- VARIATION C: HALBERT + FFF ---
Headline:
Body:
CTA:
 5. After all 3 variations, write:
"Recommended test order: __, __, __"
Explain in 2-3 sentences why that order, given the avatar above.
 6. NATURAL VOICE RULES (apply to ALL output. Non-negotiable.):

DO NOT use:
 - Em dashes or en dashes. Use commas, periods, or colons instead.
 - "It is important to note," "In today's fast-paced world," "Let us dive into," "Imagine if," "But here is the thing"
 - "Whether you are a X or a Y" sentence starters
 - Triple-synonym stacks ("innovative, cutting-edge, and revolutionary")
 - "Furthermore," "Moreover," "Additionally," "In conclusion"
 - "Game-changer," "revolutionary," "cutting-edge," "leveraging," "synergy," "unlock," "harness," "robust," "seamless"
 - Closing lines like "And that is a [adjective] thing"
 - Any sentence that could appear in any other piece of content. Cut anything generic.
DO write like this:
 - Short sentences. Mixed with longer ones. Then short again.
 - Specific numbers, names, named moments over generic statements
 - Contractions like don't, can't, won't. Sounds like a person, not a manual.
 - Start sentences with conjunctions when it reads naturally (And, But, So)
 - "You" not "we" or "marketers" (unless explicitly told otherwise)
 7. FINAL CHECK: Before sending your final output, re-read what you have written ONCE for typos and dropped characters (common pattern: missing letters mid-word like "padle" for "paddle" or "abut" for "about"). Fix any you find. This is a non-negotiable final pass.

Generate all 3 ad variations now.

WHAT GOOD OUTPUT LOOKS LIKE

shape, not full output

Sample output excerpt:

VARIATION A: PAS

Headline: Finish Your Second Cup

Body: Your coffee shouldn't turn into a stomach ache before your 10 a.m. call. And you shouldn't have to bury a burnt bag under creamer just to finish it. Northline Coffee Co. roasts low acid, small batch coffee for the person who still wants the ritual without the regret. Start with one bag or set up the two bag monthly subscription and stop settling for coffee you pour out halfway through.

CTA: Try Northline Coffee Co. today.

Recommended test order: A, C, B. The pain is already clear and easy to recognize, so the direct PAS version earns the first test. The Halbert and Feel, Felt, Found version gives you a stronger story angle for the second round.

RUN IT AGAIN LIKE THIS

run this next

Take Variation __ from above. Convert it into a landing page hero:

- Main headline (1 line, under 10 words)
- Subheadline (1 line, under 20 words)
- First-section opener (2-3 sentences that pay off the headline)

Take Variation __ from above. Convert it into an email:

- Subject line (under 50 chars, curiosity-driven)
- Preview text (under 80 chars)
- First 3 sentences of the email body

META AI BONUS

Paste the full prompt and all filled inputs together in Meta AI. If the response gets compressed, ask it to expand one variation at a time without changing the framework.

04

List Email Prompt

3 email variations for your list (Welcome, Story Broadcast, Sales), story-driven, with a recommended send order.

Email / paste ready

PROMPT 04

List Email Prompt

3 email variations for your list (Welcome, Story Broadcast, Sales), story-driven, with a recommended send order.

BEFORE YOU START

start here

Bring a real origin story or customer win in three to five sentences. Keep your avatar from Prompt 1 nearby and decide the one action your sales email should drive.

COPY EVERYTHING IN THIS BOX

copy this

You are an expert email copywriter trained on Cole Schafer, Justin Welsh, Alex Hormozi long-form letters, and modern creator-list email patterns that actually get read and replied to in 2026. Your job is to write 3 distinct email variations for my list, each using a different framework. Story is the spine of all three.

INPUTS (paste your answers below this line):

- WHAT I SELL: [offer in 1-2 sentences]
- CUSTOMER AVATAR: [paste your output from Prompt #1, OR describe your customer's pain, desire, and language in 3-5 sentences]
- MY ORIGIN STORY OR A CUSTOMER WIN STORY: [one short story, 3-5 sentences. Either why you started this or a specific customer transformation you've witnessed. Real over rehearsed.]
- THIS EMAIL'S GOAL (for the sales variation): [what specific action you want subscribers to take, or what offer you are presenting]

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Write exactly 3 email variations. Each uses a DIFFERENT framework. These are WARM-audience emails to people on your list, not cold prospecting. Story is the spine of all three.
2. The 3 frameworks, in this exact order:

VARIATION A: WELCOME EMAIL (first touch after they subscribe)

- Subject: 4-7 words, conversational. NOT "Welcome to..." (cliche).
- Opening (2 sentences): A specific moment from the origin story above that introduces who you are and why they should care.
- Middle (3-5 sentences): What they can expect from your emails, what kind of value, what cadence.
- Close (2 sentences): One small, concrete action they can take right now (reply with their #1 problem, read one piece, etc.)
- Signature: First name only
- Length: 120-200 words

VARIATION B: STORY-DRIVEN BROADCAST (weekly newsletter)

- Subject: 5-9 words, hook-style. Curiosity or specific number. NEVER "Newsletter 27" or dated.
- Opening (3-5 sentences): Lead with a specific story or scene. Real moment, real characters, real detail. No abstract setup.
- Middle (4-6 sentences): The lesson, observation, or insight extracted from the story. Tie it to something the reader can use.
- Close (2-3 sentences): One soft CTA. A question to reply to, a resource to check, an idea to try. NOT a hard sell.
- Signature: First name only
- Length: 200-350 words

VARIATION C: SALES / OFFER EMAIL (warm audience, story-driven pitch)

- Subject: 4-7 words, curiosity-driven. NOT "X% off" subject lines.
- Story open (3-5 sentences): A specific customer transformation or a specific problem story. Real-feeling detail.
- Pivot to offer (2-3 sentences): How your offer solves the specific problem in the story. Address the OBJECTION underneath, not just the benefit.
- Stakes (1-2 sentences): What happens if they keep doing what they are doing now.
- CTA (1 line): One direct ask. Specific link or action.
- Optional P.S. (1 line): A bonus reframe, a deadline reminder, or a personal aside.
- Length: 200-350 words

3. Apply these rules to ALL THREE variations:

- Speak to ONE person, never "subscribers" or "everyone" or "you guys"
- Open every email with story, scene, or specific moment. Never "I hope you are doing well" or "Big news today" or "Welcome back"
- Use the customer's exact language wherever possible
- Specific over vague: real names, real numbers, real moments
- ONE CTA per email. Never stack asks.
- Write like you are sending it to a specific friend, not "your audience"

4. Format each variation EXACTLY like this:

--- VARIATION A: WELCOME ---

Subject: [subject line]

[body]

--- VARIATION B: STORY BROADCAST ---

Subject:

[body]

--- VARIATION C: SALES / OFFER ---

Subject:

[body]

5. After all 3 variations, write:

"Recommended send order: __, __, __"

Explain in 2-3 sentences which one to send first based on your current list state (new subs vs warm engaged vs cold re-engagement).

6. NATURAL VOICE RULES (apply to ALL output. Non-negotiable.):

DO NOT use:

- Em dashes or en dashes. Use commas, periods, or colons instead.
- "It is important to note," "In today's fast-paced world," "Let us dive into," "Imagine if," "But here is the thing"
- "Whether you are a X or a Y" sentence starters
- Triple-synonym stacks ("innovative, cutting-edge, and revolutionary")
- "Furthermore," "Moreover," "Additionally," "In conclusion"
- "Game-changer," "revolutionary," "cutting-edge," "leveraging," "synergy," "unlock," "harness," "robust," "seamless"
- Closing lines like "And that is a [adjective] thing"
- Any sentence that could appear in any other piece of content. Cut anything generic.

DO write like this:

- Short sentences. Mixed with longer ones. Then short again.
- Specific numbers, names, named moments over generic statements
- Contractions like don't, can't, won't. Sounds like a person, not a manual.
- Start sentences with conjunctions when it reads naturally (And, But, So)
- "You" not "we" or "marketers" (unless explicitly told otherwise)

7. FINAL CHECK: Before sending your final output, re-read what you have written ONCE for typos and dropped characters (common pattern: missing letters mid-word like "padle" for "paddle" or "abut" for "about").

Fix any you find. This is a non-negotiable final pass.

Generate all 3 email variations now.

WHAT GOOD OUTPUT LOOKS LIKE

shape, not full output

Sample output excerpt:

VARIATION B: STORY BROADCAST

Subject: The half cup in the sink

At 10:14 on a Tuesday morning, Sarah poured half a mug down the sink before her next Zoom call.

She loved coffee. She hated the part where the second cup tasted stale and sat heavy for the next hour.

That is the problem most coffee brands miss. The goal isn't more caffeine. The goal is a cup you still want to finish.

So this week, check the bag sitting on your counter. Smell it. Brew it black before you cover it up with creamer. And ask yourself one question: do you actually enjoy the coffee you keep buying?

Hit reply and tell me what ruins a bag fastest for you.

Matt

RUN IT AGAIN LIKE THIS

run this next

Take Variation A (the welcome email) above. Build a 4-email welcome sequence around it. Email 1 is the welcome. Emails 2-4 each deliver one specific piece of value or story. Each under 250 words. Sequence ends with one soft CTA, no hard sell.

Take Variation C (the sales email) above. Expand into a 3-email sales sequence:

- Email 1: The story-driven pitch (Variation C as-is)
- Email 2 (2 days later): The objection killer. Address the #1 fear stopping people from buying.
- Email 3 (4 days later): The deadline / scarcity close. Last call. Each under 250 words. Same voice. Same CTA.

META AI BONUS

Paste the prompt and your four filled inputs together in Meta AI. If the answer cuts off, ask for Variation A, then B, then C in separate replies.

05

Content Cascade Prompt

one long input (transcript, podcast, doc) turned into a blog post, an X thread, a LinkedIn post, and an email, all in one voice, plus a 7-day publishing plan.

Cascade / paste ready

PROMPT 05

Content Cascade Prompt

one long input (transcript, podcast, doc) turned into a blog post, an X thread, a LinkedIn post, and an email, all in one voice, plus a 7-day publishing plan.

BEFORE YOU START

start here

Have your source content ready to paste. A fuller transcript, podcast note set, or document gives the prompt more specific moments to work with. Define your audience in one sentence.

COPY EVERYTHING IN THIS BOX

copy this

You are an expert content strategist trained in modern multi-platform content repurposing. Your job is to take ONE long input from me (a video transcript, podcast episode notes, training session, or long doc) and turn it into four platform-native outputs:

- A blog post
- An X / Twitter thread
- A LinkedIn post
- A short email

Each output should feel NATIVE to that platform, not a copy-paste of the source. Voice should be CONSISTENT across all four: they should sound like the same person wrote them on the same day.

INPUTS (paste below this line):

- SOURCE INPUT: [paste your full transcript / notes / doc here]
- MY VOICE (optional, 2-3 sentences): [conversational, direct, coaching, etc.: if skipped, Claude will infer from the source]
- AUDIENCE: [who you are writing for, 1 sentence]
- ONE CTA (optional): [the action you want readers to take across all four outputs. If skipped, each output gets a platform-native CTA.]

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Read the source carefully. Identify the ONE CENTRAL IDEA worth amplifying. Everything you write circles back to this idea.
2. Identify 3-5 SPECIFIC MOMENTS, examples, or quotes from the source that prove the central idea. Use these across the four outputs.
3. Generate the four outputs in this order:

--- OUTPUT 1: BLOG POST ---

Length: 800-1200 words

- SEO-friendly title (under 60 chars)
- 1-sentence subtitle that sells the click
- Hook paragraph (2-3 sentences addressing reader's pain or curiosity)
- 3-5 H2 section headers, each on one aspect of the central idea
- Each section: 150-250 words, includes a specific moment from source
- Conclusion: restates the central idea, hands off to CTA
- CTA: one platform-native CTA

--- OUTPUT 2: X / TWITTER THREAD ---

Length: 6-10 tweets, each under 280 chars

- Tweet 1 (HOOK): Pattern interrupt or specific number tied to the central idea. Must work standalone: earns the "show more" click.
- Tweets 2-N: Each tweet advances the argument. No filler. Each

- one quotable on its own.
 - Final tweet (CTA): One direct ask. Optional link to the blog post.
 - NO emojis, NO "🔗" markers, NO "1/", NO "thread:" prefix.
- OUTPUT 3: LINKEDIN POST ---
- Length: 200-300 words
- HOOK: First line is the hook. Line break after it.
 - Story or observation: 2-4 short lines, line break between each
 - Central insight: 1 line, set off with line breaks
 - 2-3 supporting points: each a single line
 - CTA: a question that invites comments (not "click here")
 - Use line breaks aggressively: LinkedIn rewards scannable posts.
- OUTPUT 4: EMAIL ---
- Length: 150-250 words
- Subject line: under 50 chars, curiosity-driven
 - Preview text: under 80 chars, payoff to the subject
 - Opening: 1-2 sentences, conversational, addresses reader directly
 - Body: 3-4 short paragraphs. ONE main idea. Tie to the central idea.
 - One personal touch: a line that feels written for this reader
 - CTA: ONE specific ask
 - Signature: first name only
4. Apply these rules to ALL FOUR outputs:
- Same voice across all four (tone, vocabulary, rhythm)
 - Same central idea: all four reinforce, none drift
 - Specific over vague: use source moments, not generic statements
 - ONE CTA per output. Never stack asks.
 - Write FOR each platform, not against it
5. NATURAL VOICE RULES (apply to ALL output. Non-negotiable.):
- DO NOT use:
- Em dashes or en dashes (:, -). Use commas, periods, or colons.
 - "It is important to note," "In today's fast-paced world," "Let us dive into," "Imagine if," "But here is the thing"
 - "Whether you are a X or a Y" sentence starters
 - Triple-synonym stacks ("innovative, cutting-edge, and revolutionary")
 - "Furthermore," "Moreover," "Additionally," "In conclusion"
 - "Game-changer," "revolutionary," "cutting-edge," "leveraging," "synergy," "unlock," "harness," "robust," "seamless"
 - Closing lines like "And that is a [adjective] thing"
 - Any sentence that could appear in any other piece of content. Cut anything generic.
- DO write like this:
- Short sentences. Mixed with longer ones. Then short again.
 - Specific numbers, names, named moments instead of generic statements
 - Contractions ("don't," "can't," "won't"): sounds like a person
 - Start sentences with conjunctions when it reads naturally (And, But, So)
 - "You" not "we" or "marketers" (unless explicitly told otherwise)
6. After all four outputs, write:
- "Cross-platform plan:" your recommendation for sequencing the four outputs over 7 days (which day, which platform, which order). Explain in 2-3 sentences why.
7. FINAL CHECK: Before sending your final output, re-read everything you have written ONCE for typos and dropped characters (common pattern: missing letters mid-word like "padle" for "paddle" or "abut" for "about"). This applies to ALL four outputs plus the cross-platform plan. Fix any you find. This is a non-negotiable final pass and especially important at this output length.

Generate all four outputs now.

WHAT GOOD OUTPUT LOOKS LIKE

shape, not full output

Source input used: A 12 minute founder video explaining why a fresh coffee bag can taste flat after seven days, how air and poor storage change the cup, and the simple routine Northline recommends after opening a bag.

Central idea: Most people blame their taste buds when the real problem is how the bag is stored after day one.

Blog title: Why Your Coffee Tastes Flat After One Week

X post opener:

"Your coffee didn't suddenly get worse on day seven. Your storage routine did."

LinkedIn opener:

"A great first cup can hide a bad seven day routine."

Email subject: Your coffee changed on day seven

Email opener:

"You aren't imagining it. The bag that smelled perfect on Monday can taste flat by the next weekend. The fix starts five seconds after you scoop the beans."

Cross platform plan: Publish the blog first, then use the X thread and LinkedIn post to pull readers into the same idea from two different angles. Send the email after the social posts so the inbox version feels like the practical next step, not a repeat.

RUN IT AGAIN LIKE THIS

run this next

Take the blog post above. Turn it into a 7-slide Instagram carousel:

- Slide 1: hook (the most scroll-stopping line from the blog)
- Slides 2-6: one key insight per slide, in handwritten-prompt style (text only, no images yet)
- Slide 7: CTA

Apply the same Natural Voice Rules (no em dashes, no AI slop).

Take the source input above. Pull 3 self-contained moments that would work as 30-60 second short-form video scripts (TikTok, Reels, Shorts).

For each: hook (1 line), body (3-5 lines), CTA (1 line).

Apply the same Natural Voice Rules.

META AI BONUS

For a long transcript, send the source input first, then paste the prompt and tell Meta AI to use your previous message as the source. Ask for one platform output at a time if the response gets clipped.

DO NOT FILE THIS AWAY

Run one today

Don't save this PDF and tell yourself you will come back to it later.

Pick one prompt. Open a real offer. Run it today.

Prompt 1 is the best place to start if your message feels fuzzy. Prompt 2 is the fastest win if you need new creative angles before your next content batch or ad test. The point isn't to admire the prompts. The point is to use one, look at the output, and make the next marketing move easier.

Have questions or stuck on this? Shoot me an email at matt@hmficmarketing.com.

Matt

HMFIC Marketing
